An innovative first-responder model of crisis intervention training.

CRISIS INTERVENTION TEAM

Regional CIT Training Program

Transforming Lives. Building Community Well-Being.

Connecting people to services they need while diverting them from our criminal justice system and hospital emergency departments.

The CIT Program

The CIT Program is a community-based collaborative between individuals and their families, the behavioral health system and providers, law enforcement agencies, National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), advocacy organizations, community colleges, and the medical community.

Training is designed to assist first responders who respond to incidents involving individuals with a mental health crisis. Officers are frequently first-line responders to calls for people experiencing crisis with a serious mental illness.

CIT programs have the following three characteristics:

Intensive Training

- First responders receive training on topics including an overview of mental health, geriatrics, substance use/co-occurring disorders, special concerns with adolescents, brain theory and medication management, personality disorders, intellectual and developmental disabilities, autism, suicide, trauma and its aftermath, homelessness, and crisis intervention and de-escalation skills.

Strong Mental Health Partnerships

- When appropriate, those responding to people in crisis use viable options for linking individuals with needed mental health treatment in lieu of arrest and incarceration.

Significant Community Involvement

- Individual and family advocates are integrally involved in the design and implementation of CIT programs.

40-Hour CIT Training

Provides Officers with Tools to:

- Identify and effectively interact with people who have mental illness or substance use disorder, and those diagnosed with intellectual and developmental disabilities.
- Utilize verbal de-escalation techniques.
- Reduce use of lethal weapons or force.
- Improve face-to-face interactions with individuals and family members.

Benefits of CIT for Behavioral Health System

- Increased opportunities for more timely and appropriate intervention with improved treatment outcomes.
- Decreased use of expensive crisis resources.
- Ongoing collaboration with first responders and community resources.
- Increased community partners in advocacy and educational efforts.

Benefits of CIT for First Responders

- Reduction in officer injury during crisis events.
- Decreased use of time and money.
- Increased appreciation and department recognition.

Benefits of CIT for Individuals and Families

- Reassurance that when a CIT Officer responds, he or she has special skills.
- Decrease use of physical intervention results in less injuries to individuals.
- Respectful, effective intervention during crisis.
- Positive relationships with behavioral health system and law enforcement enhances trust.
- Partners in advocacy and educational efforts.
- Reduction in myths and stigma of mental illness.

CIT History

- Crisis Intervention Team training was developed in Memphis, TN in 1988 and is now embraced nationally.
- The CIT Program was introduced in North Carolina in 2004. Presently, the state of North Carolina has approximately 20% of law enforcement trained as CIT officers.

How to Participate

- Present an educational session during CIT training for first responders.
- Provide a site visit during the week of CIT training for first responders.
- Network with families or members who would want to share their experience.
- Encourage your community first responders to participate in training.
